The Trustees of Bullis School announced Oct. 21 the choice of Christian G. Sullivan as the new Head of School. Sullivan will succeed current Head Dr. Gerald L. Boarman, on July 1, 2020.

“We’re thrilled to welcome Christian Sullivan to Bullis,” Patrick Caulfield, Chairman of the Bullis Board of Trustees and co-chair of the Head of School Search Committee said. “He understood immediately the core strengths that Bullis already enjoys, and he wants to capitalize on and optimize those strengths. At the same time, he is a self-driven and disciplined administrator who recognizes the sustainability challenges facing independent education. Christian is warm and charismatic, confident, direct, and straightforward. His leadership style fits the Bullis culture perfectly.” Sullivan is a strategic thinker and big-picture visionary with a strong focus on and passion for student-centered education and organization, Caulfield said. His background and approach dovetail with Bullis' mission to ‘provide a student-centered balanced experience in academics, arts, athletics, and community service,’ and to ‘prepare all students to become caring citizens and creative, critical thinkers who will thrive in tomorrow’s world.’”

Sullivan comes to Bullis from Annie Wright Schools in Tacoma, Washington, where he was Head of Schools for ten years.

“His decade-long leadership has been transformative for Annie Wright Schools,” Michele Bessler, Chair of Annie Wright’s Board of Trustees wrote. “I speak for the entire Board of Trustees when I express our sorrow at his leaving and gratitude for his service. We have two college-aged children: daughter Lexy at Barnard College and son Matthew at Macalester College. Sullivan began his educational career in London, where he was born and raised. He moved to Kenya to teach math in Nairobi for seven years, and where he met his wife. Sullivan and Isenman then returned to the UK, where Sullivan headed the mathematics department and served as Assistant Housemaster at a pre-K through 8 school in Oxford. Sullivan moved to the United States in 2000 to become the Middle School Director at Flint Hill School in Virginia. In 2006, Sullivan was appointed Head of School at Fairfield Country Day School in Connecticut before going to Annie Wright Schools. Sullivan holds a Bachelor of Arts in Education from the University of Durham in the UK, where he was a varsity soccer, cricket, and rugby player. He also holds a Master of Arts in Educational Management from the University of Bath in the UK and a Master of Arts in Private School Leadership from Klingenstein Center at Columbia University Teachers College. Sullivan is joined by his wife, Lisa Isenman, who grew up in the DC area and holds an undergraduate degree from Washington University in St. Louis and a master’s degree in Journalism from Columbia University. They have two college-aged children: daughter Lexy at Barnard College and son Matthew at Macalester College. Sullivan began his educational career in London, where he was born and raised. Sullivan’s Dr. Boarman said he looks forward to getting to know Sullivan better over the coming months. “Christian Sullivan will have the privilege of working with the greatest group of students, teachers, and staff any head could hope for. Bullis School is a special place, it’s a family. In its first 90 years, this school has had only 5 heads. It is my honor to welcome Christian G. Sullivan as the sixth head of this excellent school,” he wrote.

Sidewalks, bike paths, police chief, Moms Demand and more packed into intimate monthly meeting.

There was plenty to talk about sidewalks, the County Budget, project delays, pedestrian and bike safety, climate issues, the new police chief and safe schools.

It was a lot to discuss during County Councilmember Andrew Friedson’s monthly meet and greet, Fridays with Friedson, held Friday, Oct. 25 at Altman’s Deli in the Cabin John Shopping Center.

A handful of District One residents showed up for the early morning meeting to bring their pet projects and peeves before their Council representative and learn what is being done, can be done or won’t be done.

In the most-likely-won’t-be-done-any-time-soon category was Bethesda resident and community activist Livleen Gill’s question about sidewalks along the stretch of Seven Locks Road between Bradley Blvd. and Democracy Lane.

Gill said when she started asking the County for sidewalks along that stretch of road, her daughter was in second grade. That daughter, she said, graduated from college this year.

“I live off Seven Locks Road and have a business off Democracy,” she said. “I technically should be able to walk. Sidewalks are so important. I’m a registered dietician and I see people dealing with chronic diseases; obesity and diabetes.”

Friedson said he was totally in agreement with Gill.

“It’s a much-delayed project,” he said. “I’m focused on pedestrian safety and road safety.”

But he added, “It’s a tough problem in time of tight budgets.”

The delay, had to do with limited money and therefore what the community has to wait for, he said.

Sidewalks along Seven Locks Road have been in the budget before and been cut or delayed, Friedson said. This year, the recommendation was for a three-year delay for the project.

“I fought to not have a delay, zero delay. We got a one-year delay.” — Councilmember Andrew Friedson on sidewalk project on Seven Locks Road

“It’s not like we aren’t talking about these things,” he said.

That was when Karl Held of Potomac spoke up. Held is a member of the Sierra Club and of the Montgomery County Faith Alliance for Climate Change.

He brought in the problem of bike paths to nowhere, that should be connected to destinations or meet up with other paths to form a larger network.

“There is a bicycle path on Falls Road at Wootton Parkway that doesn’t go all the way to Potomac,” he said.

As with the sidewalk issue, Friedson agreed, but said it was a matter of priority and funding.

Here Friedson added a plug for his own pet project: growing the economy.

“We need more money, we need more revenue,” he said. “We are not growing at the required rates. If we are going to keep up with the services we expect, we need to grow the economy.”

There were issues of safe schools brought up by Elaine Arndt, a member of Moms Demand Action for Gun Safety.

On the recent nomination of acting Police Chief Marcus Jones as police chief, Friedson said he plans to support Jones.

And then, the ninety minute meeting turned back to sidewalks and bike paths, pedestrian and vehicular safety as relating to climate change.

“We are trying to keep the County focus on [reducing] greenhouse emissions,” Held said.

Friedson has been supportive but he appreciates his constituents who to keep reminding him, he said.

District 1 is the most geographically diverse — and the most environmentally sensitive — in Montgomery County, spanning from the DC Line to the Frederick County Line along the Potomac River, including Bethesda, Cabin John, Chevy Chase, Garrett Park, Glen Echo, Friendship Heights, Kensington, North Bethesda, Potomac, Poolesville, Randolph Hills, and Somerset.

Friedson’s District is home to Montgomery County’s Agricultural Reserve, the Capital Crescent Trail and the C&O Canal, and the Potomac River, the region’s major source of drinking water.

In total, 26,502 runners competed in the 44th annual Marine Corps Marathon events, including the traditional 26.2 mile marathon, the MCM 50K and the MCM 10K.

The top Marine Corps Marathon finisher was Jordan Tropf, 27, from Montgomery County, Md. “I love this race because of the landmarks and the crowd support,” Tropf said. "The [wear] blue mile really reminded me why I was running and gave me the push I needed to finish.”

Tropf completed the marathon with a time of 2:27:43, shaving 9 minutes and 32 seconds off his 2011 time. Brittany Charboneau, 31, crossed the finish line as the first place Marine Corps Marathon female with a time of 2:44:47.

Torrential rains may have slowed him down, but they didn’t stop local runner Michael Wardian as he crossed the finish line to win the inaugural Marine Corps Marathon 50K race Oct. 27 in Arlington.

“Winning your hometown event in such a great year, I couldn’t ask for anything else,” said Wardian, 45, who completed the distance (31 miles) with a time of 3:11:52.

Wardian, who will run as the New York City Marathon virtual ambassador next weekend in Hong Kong.

“It’s been a pretty epic year,” said Wardian, who ran the entire 89.9 miles of the Washington D.C. Beltway in 17:54:59 in late June.

“I ran across Israel earlier this year and set a fastest known time for that. I did about 1,000 kilometers in 10 days.”

Wardian also completed a world record for 10 marathons in 10 days.

“Seven of those were on seven different continents,” added Wardian, who ran his first marathon at the Marine Corps Marathon in 1996. “And to win the inaugural 50K today is pretty exciting for me.”

More than 1,700 runners joined Wardian along the ultra distance 50K route, including Alexandria’s Dustin Whitlow, 33, who finished second with a time of 3:21:36.

Patrick Early, 40, of Montclair, Va., placed third in 3:40:50.

Other notable 44th MCM finishers include Gen. David H. Berger, 38th Commandant of the Marine Corps who served as the official MCM starter with a time of 5:29:38; Gen. (ret) Joseph F. Dunford, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who finished with a time of 4:45:00; U.S. Sen. Shelley Capito of West Virginia, who ran with a time of 6:45:56; U.S. Rep. Debra Haaland from New Mexico, who served as the official MCM 50K starter, with a time of 6:06:01; Medal of Honor recipient Dakota Meyer, who finished with a time of 5:20:40.

Season 14 American Idol runner up Clark Beckham was the 44th MCM National Anthem singer and finished with a time of 3:45:58.

Australia’s Dean Karnazes, best selling author, philanthropist and ultra marathoner, finished the 50K in a time of 5:38:14.

Sgt. Maj. Troy E. Black, 19th Sergeant Major of the Marine Corps, served as the official MCM10K starter and finished the race in a time of 01:01:01.

"Underwhere" and What

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Though I don't think I've broken any laws, other than the laws of consumerism, I may have gone over to the dark side. And by 'dark side,' I refer to two elements, one way more significant than the other, both of which I will get to in short order. In the interim, I refer to that most private of previously public purchases: underwear.

The last two times I bought underwear, I did not, as my father before me did so regularly for his two sons: buy from a local distributor. No. I didn't brick and mortar, nor did I drive to buy from an upscale brand of underwear which has given me pause to rethink how I might further up-grade/expand my wardrobe. Rather, I simply typed, mouse-clicked and purchased online, if I'm not mistaken. I am not sure that 'on-line' is adequate to accept the reference, but I expect that with the passage of time, the familiarity of this will wear down any anticipated objections. Still, I imagine there will be an adjustment period.

Those purchases being made, I do feel as if I've crossed a line of sorts. (And the editor is likely to agree and assert selective deletion.) At the very least, consumers and their underwear purchases - and processes, seemed sacrosanct and immune to the lure of the internet. Granted, its prescriptive privacy and seemingly endless choices/supply would presumably appeal to one's sense of curiosity. But not having the opportunity to physically pick and choose, and then grab and go to the cashier while glancing at the assorted inventory while you saunter through the department now seems like a lost art. An art that will never again be bid on, certainly not at Christie's anyway. I don't feel guilty exactly, about what I've done, but do feel as if I am struck at the very foundation of the consumer's code of decency. I mean, if I'm going to buy underwear online then there really is no stopping the internet's intrusion into our daily lives. And if the artificial intelligence rating the sites knows about our most personal preferences, then what's preventing a mass outing of mankind and womankind? To that possible end, I am now going to mention the second element of my recent purchase for which you likewise might have an opinion. This time I have literally gone over the dark side: color, blue,black, green and gray. The tidy whiteys of my youth and nearly entire adulthood have had to give way to color. Another break with my underwear and nearly entire adulthood have had to give way to color. Another break with my underwear past which also seems unforgivable. My father always wore white underwear. How could I, as his son, break with such familial tradition? This is the weight I am now carrying. I'm not exactly leaving the faith but I do feel that I'm definitely disconnecting.

And since these online purchases of non-white underwear are not that recent six months or so), recently, as in the last month, I have given consideration to yet another total break to the place where I've purchased these non-white "underwear," brand. I have heard multiple radio advertisements on my satellite radio concerning an upscale brand of underwear which has given me pause to rethink how I might further upgrade the neighborhood where my underwear has been residing.

It's been difficult enough changing how I buy my underwear, and then transitioning from whites to colors, but now possibly chang-ing brands just for the sake of some creature comfort? I haven't heard any complaints from the neighbors so why bother? To be cool and comfortable? I thought I was. Apparently not. Dare I break yet another decades-old tradition? It may be too much.
